Excerpt from The Latter-Day Saints Millennial Star, Vol. 67: February 16, 1905 In the neighboring city of Lancaster we attended, one Sunday evening, a meeting of the colored people (shouting Methodists), where I heard for the first time a Negro preacher, who delivered to a congregation of several hundred souls what he called the fish sermon, taking for his text the well known Scriptural passage, Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind. In a most ingenious manner (though I doubted his authorship of the sermon) he proceeded to arraign the various professions and vocations, comparing each to some sort of fish, and paralleling their characteristics in a way quite telling. For instance, the lawyer was a shark, and the doctor something else, etc. All the while he was speaking, he strode back and forth upon the platform before a rapt multitude of worshippers, the front rows not only kneeling, but fairly groveling, upon the floor, moaning, groaning, and ejaculating Amen, O Lord, and other pious exclamations, as a continuous accompaniment to his discourse. Ever and anon the preacher would pause and say to them, Keep on praying, brothers, sisters, keep on praying, and I have no doubt that I will be able to mention some sixty kinds of fish. And I verily believe he did, before he sat down, bathed in a glow of rapture that might have consumed him but for the profuse perspiration that acted as a safeguard.
