Ishi Press, United States, 2001. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: German . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Those of us who are Americans grew up watching World War II movies showing how the Americans always beat the Germans. Amazing that we always win considering the fact that our side nearly lost the war. Since there is a shortage of true stories about the war, we get to watch the purely fictional accounts such as The Dirty Dozen and The Guns of Navarone or the accounts that at least might be somewhat true such as Stalag 17, Darbys Rangers, and so many others I could not begin to list them all. Had the side they were on won the war, they would have been regarded as heroes, but since they lost they would be forgotten were it not for this book. Felix Steiner has great praise for the one million men fighting under him, saying repeatedly that they were superior in every way to the Russians and others they were fighting against. As to the reason they lost, we all know the real reason. They were outnumbered ten to one. This book has not been translated into...
