Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. During the summer of 1983, a young girl faced with the prospect of having to leave Goa - the picturesquely quaint state on India's Western coast, and a Portuguese colony till 1961 - rediscovers the sights, the smells, the sounds, and the magic of the place she grew up in, and discovers love along the way. This novel is a window into the customs of a land slowly morphing out of its colonial past, and an ode to its natural beauty. Narrated by the 18-year-old orphaned granddaughter of granny-mai and pai in the throes of intense emotional turmoil over love that is possibly unrequited, over ties that might be broken, over life and scene-changing decisions that must be made, as she contemplates accepting the offer to study at a university in the USA. The unnamed granddaughter's serene and uneventful life is disrupted by the arrival of Daniel, a neighbor now working in the US. She instinctively loves him, and he impulsively asks her to marry him. The path to matrimonial bliss, however, is fraught with bumps: her impregnated best-friend Andrea with Daniel being the possible father, her childhood friend Ryan who wants to marry her, vacillation over wanting to go to the US, and staying on to savor Goa while it is still untainted, and snuggle with her granny-mai and pai. A 100-year old chapel being demolished in the name of modernization is symbolical of the unwarranted change afflicting her beloved Goa.
